ABSTRACT

Results of the 10th national survey (1982-83) of bachelor's degree granting institutions in the United States concerning their foreign language entrance and degree requirements encompass the responses of 1,261 institutions. Each institution is classified in one of six categories, according to its status in relation to the 9th survey, carried out in 1974-75: (1) requirement established since 1974-75; (2) requirement increased; (3) requirement abolished; (4) requirement reduced; (5) requirement maintained; and (6) no requirement, either in 1974 or 1982. Three data tables are included in the survey report: (1) the number of responses and percentage of the total classified in each category, separately for entrance and degree requirements; (2) the status of entrance and degree requirements in all institutions, juxtaposed with responses from the previous two surveys; and (3) entrance and degree requirements outlined by state and region. A directory of all responding institutions, listed alphabetically by state, gives coded information about entrance and degree requirements. Of the institutions responding to both this and the 1974 survey, half had reduced and half had increased their degree requirements, whereas in 1974 the change was found to be primarily downward. FOREWORD

The present study of foreign language entrance and degree requirements in U.S. colleges and universities is the most recent in a series going back to 1952, the year that marked the beginning of the Modern Language Association's Foreign Language Program. The 1982-83 report documents a continuation of the "downward" trend, first evident in the 1970-71 study, away from the strong language requirements prevalent in the 1950's and 1960's. While many members of the teaching profession have assumed that increased public support and activism on behalf of foreign language education might have led to a reversal of the trend, the results of the 1982-83 study offer little direct evidence in support of such expectations. Looking at the 1,190 institutions represented in both the 1974 and the 1982 surveys, one sees that, of the institutions reporting change, approximately half strengthened their degree requirements and half reduced them. In view of the rather long interval between the 1974 and 1982 studies, it is certainly very likely that more institutions dropped their requirements during the earlier years and more restored them during the later years. Since, however, we lack survey data concerning the date on which changes went into effect, such a hypothesis cannot be directly supported. In any case, although the overall trend between 1974 and 1982 continued to be downward, the number of institutions involved was considerably smaller than the number between 1966 and 1974.

The data for the present report were recorded and compiled by Research Assistant Martha Browne, who undertook the task of converting the information reported by department chairmen into the concise "code" entry that appears opposite the name of each institution listed in the Directory of Institutions. Though difficult to formulate, the "code" presents no serious obstacle to the user of this report.

We acknowledge with gratitude the cooperation of the department chairpersons and other colleagues who supplied the data upon which the report is based.

SURVEY OF FOREIGN LANGUAGE ENTRANCE AND DEGREE
REQUIREMENTS IN UNITED STATES COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES
FALL 1982

Summary of Results

The 1982-83 Survey of Foreign Language Entrance and Degree Requirements in B.A.-granting institutions in the United States was the tenth such survey conducted by the Modern Language Association of America. The first survey in the series appeared in 1953; annual revisions followed until 1957, and the survey was conducted again in 1960, 1965, 1970, and 1974.¹ Like the two previous studies, the present survey was addressed to foreign language department chairmen rather than to registrars.

The tables and directory of the survey encompass responses received from 1,261 colleges and universities, or 100% of the B.A.-granting institutions covered by the survey.² In a few cases, information omitted from the questionnaire responses was obtained from current editions of institutional catalogues.

Table I (below) shows changes in the status of institutional entrance and degree requirements between fall 1974 and fall 1982 for the 1,190 colleges and universities that responded in both years. The procedure used in the survey enabled chairmen to respond rapidly to a request for a precise statement of current entrance and degree requirements. The responses were then transcribed by means of a simple code used in the compilation of the institutional directory of the survey, and the coded responses for 1982 were compared with those recorded in 1974. On the basis of this comparison, each institutional response was classified into one of six categories, labeled A through F. Entrance and degree requirements were treated separately. The six categories are:

- (A) "requirement established," i.e., in institutions where there had been no requirement in 1974-75;
- (B) "requirement increased" since 1974;
- (C) "requirement abolished" (i.e., totally) since 1974;
- (D) "requirement reduced" (e.g., from four semesters to three, etc.) since 1974.
- (E) "requirement maintained" unchanged since 1974; and
- (F) "no requirement," either in 1974-75 or 1982-83, hence status unchanged.

The "increase in options" category (e.g., an institution that formerly permitted no substitution for the required foreign language sequence has now generalized its requirement and allows students to choose one of a number of alternatives, including foreign languages, to satisfy it) was used in the surveys of 1970 and 1974 but not in the 1982 survey. Because the current survey adopted a narrower definition of "foreign language requirement," its statistical results are not strictly comparable to those of earlier studies.

Whereas previous surveys counted as having a foreign language requirement some institutions that reported foreign language study as one option for satisfying a degree requirement, the present survey has counted only those that have an absolute requirement: one that allows no non-foreign language substitutions.

Table I shows the number of responses and the percentage of the total classified in each category, separately for entrance and degree requirements. Summary figures are given for the combined categories A and B, called "upward change"; C and D, "downward change"; and E and F, "unchanged."

A comparison between Table I in the 1982-83 report and the corresponding table in the 1974-75 report is instructive. In 1982, the overwhelming majority of institutions (74.7%) reported no change. In 1974, that figure was much lower (60.8%). Even more interesting is the fact that, of those institutions reporting change in 1982, half fall in the "upward change" category and half in the "downward change" category. In 1974, change was almost totally "downward."

Table II summarizes the status of entrance and degree requirements at all 1,261 institutions that responded to the 1982-83 survey, juxtaposing the figures with corresponding data from the previous two surveys. Consistent with the figures in Table I, the data in Table II show a continuing decline in the number and percentage of institutions having entrance or degree requirements in foreign languages. Table II is not concerned with quantitative increases or reductions (i.e., changes in the level of proficiency demanded) in the requirements, only with whether or not an institution still has a requirement.

In Table III the entrance and degree requirement data in Table II are broken down on a state-by-state, region-by-region basis. For each state the number of institutions reporting a college-wide requirement is given, together with a figure showing what percentage of the total number of B.A.-granting institutions in the state fall into this category. It is instructive to compare the regional percentages with the national figures. Thus, Table III shows that the New England and Mideast regions are well above the national average in the percentage of institutions having a college-wide entrance requirement in foreign languages, the Far West region is about the same as the national average, and all other regions fall below it. In the case of the degree requirements, New England, Mideast, Plains, Rocky Mountains, and Far West are below the national average, while Great Lakes, Southeast, and Southwest are above average.

The largest section of the report consists of the directory of all responding colleges and universities (listed alphabetically, by state), showing in "coded" form, each institution's entrance and degree requirements in foreign languages. A set of supplements to the directory provides lists of institutions that have added or dropped their entrance or degree requirements since the last previous survey of 1974-75.

¹See PMLA 48, 4, Part 2 (Sept. 1953), 40-55, and corresponding issues 1954-57; results of the 1957 and 1960 surveys are summarized in the 1966 report: Glen D. Willbern, "Foreign Language Entrance and Degree Requirements in Colleges that Grant the B.A. Degree: Fall 1966," Foreign Language Annals 1.1 (1967): 49-70. The 1970-71 survey report was published as a monograph by the MLA in 1972 and was summarized in an article by Richard I. Brod, "The Foreign Language Requirement--A Report on the 1970-71 MLA Survey," ADFL Bulletin 3.1 (1971): 55-58. The 1974-75 report was published as a monograph by the MLA in 1975 and was summarized in an article by Richard I. Brod and Jeffrey H. Meyerson, "The Foreign Language Requirement--Report on the 1974-75 Survey," ADFL Bulletin 7.1 (1975): 43-48.

²The master list of institutions was derived from the most recent available (1981-82) edition of the Education Directory: Colleges and Universities, published by the National Center for Education Statistics of the U.S. Department of Education.

Directory

KEY

Each entry in the following Directory of Institutions consists of two coded statements separated by a semicolon; symbols before the semicolon refer to foreign language requirements for entrance, those after it to foreign language requirements for the B.A.

C	college
SC	state college
SU	state university
TC	teacher college
U	university
CL	classical language
comp sci	computer science
FL	foreign language
Fr	French
MFL	modern foreign language
N	a new foreign language begun in college
Sp	Spanish
q	quarter hours
s	semester hours
u	high school units
CEEB	the College Entrance Examination Board Achievement Test or College Placement Examination in an FL (a number following this symbol shows the minimum score accepted by the college)
Hs	high school (the degree requirement may be satisfied wholly or in part by high school credits)
min	minimum (the amount of credit that must be earned in college regardless of previous study)
Pl	placement (placement tests are used to check FL preparation at entrance for assignment to appropriate level in college)
Pr	proficiency (usually refers to a satisfactory score on a proficiency examination)
/	or (separates alternatives)
—	none (no foreign language requirement)
+	additional (designates, immediately after the semicolon, the amount of college credit required to satisfy the degree requirement in the FL offered for entrance)

Examples

1. —; 14sHs
 - a. There is no entrance requirement.
 - b. The B.A. requirement is 14 semester hours, which may be satisfied wholly or in part by high school credits.
2. 2u; + 6s/N:14s
 - a. The entrance requirement is 2 high school units of FL.
 - b. In college, the requirement is 6 additional semester hours of high school language or 14 semester hours of a new FL.
3. 3u/2u + 2u; 15qHsPl/Pr CEEB 560
 - a. Incoming students must have completed 3 high school units of one FL, or 2 units in each of two FLs.
 - b. The degree requirement may be satisfied either by 15 quarter hours of an FL taken in college, which may be satisfied wholly or in part by high school credits, subject to the results of a placement test, or by proficiency, demonstrated by a score of 560 or above on a CEEB Achievement Test or College Placement Examination in an FL, or the equivalent.
4. MFL:2u + CEEB; MFL:12sHs (min 3sC)
 - a. The entrance requirement is 2 high school units of a modern foreign language in addition to a satisfactory score on a CEEB Achievement Test in that language.
 - b. The degree requirement is 12 semester hours of a modern foreign language, which may be reduced, to a minimum of 3 semester hours taken in college, for students with prior training.

FALL 1982 SURVEY OF FOREIGN LANGUAGE ENTRANCE AND DEGREE REQUIREMENTS FOR CANDIDATES FOR THE BACHELOR'S DEGREE IN UNITED STATES COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

Dear Language Department Chair:

The Modern Language Association (MLA), under a grant from the U.S. Department of Education, is continuing its studies of entrance and degree requirements in foreign languages at all colleges and universities in the United States that grant a bachelor's degree. The published results of the 1982-83 survey will include analyses of the national picture in language requirements, a study of trends since 1953, and a state-by-state directory of current institutional requirements. Since the directory is likely to be used by guidance counselors, school administrators, and other concerned individuals and agencies, we urge you to ensure the accuracy of the entry for your institution by returning the survey form by 25 October if possible.

As we did in our 1974-75 survey, we are asking once again for information about language requirements for specific majors as well as about college-wide requirements. A new feature of the current survey is a request for information about requirements for degrees other than the B.A. A summary of these requirements will appear under the name of the institution in the survey directory.

Progress reports on the survey will appear during the spring of 1983 in various professional publications, and a final report will be printed in a fall issue of the ADFL Bulletin, published by the Association of Departments of Foreign Languages (ADFL).

INSTRUCTIONS

On the reverse side you will find computer-printed statements describing the entrance and degree requirements at your institution as they were recorded in our 1974-75 survey. Please examine the 1974-75 statements and then complete Part I and, if applicable, Part II of the questionnaire.

In responding to Items B and D of Part I, please give sufficient detail so that a new description of your institution's requirement can be prepared.

QUESTIONNAIRE

PART I

1974-75 Entrance Requirement

1974-75 Degree Requirement

Please check the appropriate boxes and complete applicable responses.

A. ☐ The printed statement of our entrance requirement is still accurate for 1982-83.

1. ☐ The entrance requirement is applicable to all degree programs.

2. ☐ The entrance requirement applies only to the following degrees: _____

B. ☐ The entrance requirement in foreign languages has changed; the current requirement is _____

C. ☐ The printed statement of our B.A. degree requirement is still accurate for 1982-83.

D. ☐ The B.A. degree requirement in foreign languages has changed; the current requirement is _____

E. ☐ Other undergraduate degree programs (e.g., the B.S.), irrespective of major, have requirements as follows:

Degree: _____

Requirement: _____

Degree: _____

Requirement: _____

PART II

If your institution does not have a college-wide language requirement but certain departments have such a requirement for their majors, please check in the list below the bachelor's degree programs for which these departments require a language. (You are not asked to describe these requirements; you may, however, add comments in the space provided.)
